

Debriefing

Thank you for participating in this study. The purpose of this research is to better understand how people make decisions. The study investigates the mechanisms of how people allocate attention, form mental representations of a situation, and reason using those representations to make decisions. Your responses will help us study the cognitive processes that support this kind of activity.

The scenarios presented in this study were constructed by the researchers for research purposes. Your responses will be analyzed together with those of other participants to examine general patterns.

Thank you again for your participation.
